

THIS WEEK'S PROGRESS

- On April 12, Gov. Andy Beshear marked another key moment in Kentucky's fight against COVID-19, when he joined health care leaders to open a drive-through vaccination site at Cardinal Stadium where 200,000 Kentuckians can get their shot of hope over the next seven weeks. To learn more, see the full release.
- Also on April 12, the Governor announced the Team Kentucky Vaccination Challenge: when 2.5 million Kentuckians have received at least their first dose of a COVID-19 vaccine, Gov. Beshear will remove capacity restrictions and physical distancing requirements for nearly all venues, events and businesses that cater to 1,000 or fewer patrons.
- Kentucky vaccination sites are currently administering the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines, which account for approximately 95% of all COVID-19 vaccines administered in Kentucky so far. A small number of Kentucky providers that were administering the Janssen / Johnson & Johnson COVID-19 vaccine until Tuesday have briefly paused its use until receiving further guidance from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. To learn more, see Tuesday's release.
- After Monday's announcement of the Team Kentucky Vaccination Challenge, on Wednesday, Gov. Beshear visited St. Elizabeth Healthcare's Training and Education Center to celebrate the hospital administering its 100,000th COVID-19 vaccination. To learn more, see the full release.
