

Local Health DistrictRapid Response Guide for

Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers

September 2020

Establishing a plan to coordinate with partners and identify needs, resources, and areas of concern before an outbreak can significantly reduce the amount of time it takes to adequately respond to the outbreak. This Rapid Response Guide is intended to aid local health districts in developing a rapid response plan to quickly address the needs of migrant farmworkers and reduce the disproportionate effect of COVID-19 outbreaks on farmworkers and the community.

Migrant farmworkers are seasonal workers who travel to do agricultural work and are unable to return to their permanent residences, typically in another country or state, within the same day. Their work coincides with Ohio's growing and picking season from May to October. Farmworkers also work in plant nurseries and processing facilities, which may operate year-round.

There are currently approximately 5,600 known migrant farmworkers located throughout the state who work at camps licensed by the Ohio Department of Health. Many owners/operators of licensed camps also provide housing for workers on the farms. These farmworkers may live in single-family homes, barracks-style housing, hotels, or homes with unrelated people.

Ohio's migrant and seasonal farmworkers are a crucial part of our farm economy and community as they work to ensure access to affordable, healthy food. Because this agricultural work often requires close contact between coworkers, group transportation, and group housing, these workers are at risk of group exposure and disease spread. Additional public health precautions are needed to protect migrant and seasonal farmworkers.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the U.S. Department of Labor have provided an Interim Guidance for Agricultural Workers and Employees. The Ohio Department of Health has listed key points for this document, incorporating information from the interim guidance, below:

- As a preventive measure, it is highly recommended that owners/operators conduct a work site assessment to identify risks for COVID-19 infection and prevention strategies to protect their workers. In the event of a COVID-19 infection on a migrant labor camp, local health departments can conduct a work site assessment to help identify areas of concern.
- Messaging and training about the use of face masks/ cloth face coverings, washing hands, and social distancing are critical to controlling the spread of COVID-19. Messaging should be directed to owners/operators and farmworkers so both groups understand their roles and responsibilities.
- Work site guidance, basic training, and information for COVID-19 prevention and control for shared worker housing, transportation vehicles, and work settings should be reviewed by owners/operators, posted in work and living spaces, and provided to employees in their native language.
- Prevention practices should follow the hierarchy of controls, which includes using source control and a combination of engineering and administrative controls (especially proper sanitation, cleaning, and disinfection) and personal protective equipment.

- Grouping workers together into smaller cohorts may reduce the spread of COVID-19 transmission in the workplace by minimizing the number of individuals who come into close contact with each other and may also reduce the number of workers quarantined because of exposure to the virus. Cohorting should be done by housing unit, if possible. This may require spacing workers apart in the fields and other work locations or having workers sit every other row in work vehicles or buses, etc.
- Owners/operators should maximize opportunities to place farmworkers residing together in the same vehicles for transportation and in the same cohorts to limit exposure. Additionally, owners/operators should limit the number of workers traveling together and implement a plan to distance within the vehicles when possible.
- Agriculture work sites developing plans for continuing operations where COVID-19 is spreading among workers or in the surrounding community should work directly with appropriate state and local health officials and occupational safety and health professionals.
- If assistance with translation/interpretation services is needed (i.e., document translation, telephonic or onsite interpretation), please contact Translation Services Support through the Ohio Department of Health.

Recommendations

Before an outbreak occurs, local health districts should contact owners/operators in their districts to identify needs and share information and resources. Please contact minorityhealth@odh.ohio.gov to request a list of farms with migrant and seasonal farmworkers in your jurisdiction.

- Provide critical COVID-19 information, such as prevention, symptoms, steps to take when ill, and where to get help. ODH has posters and signs available in English and Spanish on the coronavirus. ohio.gov website. Encourage owners/operators to post these messages in work and living spaces where they can be easily seen. Be advised the Spanish language has various dialects. It also cannot be assumed that everyone from a Latin American country speaks Spanish. If you cannot find resources in a language you need, please contact Translation Services Support at the Ohio Department of Health.
- Remind owners/operators to immediately notify their local health department in the event of a positive case in order to avert or mitigate a possible outbreak.
- Remind owners/operators they may need to provide notice to co-workers who may have been exposed to COVID-19.
- Explore how you can support growers with isolation needs for workers who test positive for COVID-19.
 Please review ODH's Approved Quarantine Locations by County. This interactive tool can help coordinate quarantine and isolation support with local partners should the need arise.

Engage with local organizations and existing programs to mobilize and allocate resources.

- Identify trusted connectors within community and faith-based organizations to identify their available resources for migrant workers. Please see the Resource Guide for Migrant and Seasonal Farm Workers (Appendix A) for a list of "Trusted Community Connectors" and additional resources.
- Resources often requested are translation/ interpretation services, education and outreach, and identification of trusted community leaders to share information with the public in their native language.
- Locate a federally qualified health center (FQHC) that provides care in Spanish or other languages spoken and understood by the workers. If available, the FQHC should have experience working with migrant farmworkers and their families. This resource can connect those with COVID-19 to quality, accessible care as well as care for chronic diseases that may increase the likelihood of COVID-19 severity.

Expand access to testing for COVID-19.

- Testing should be made available where workers are located. To the extent feasible, work with owners/ operators to provide access to on-site testing for COVID-19 provided by the local health department or healthcare providers. All healthcare providers should be made aware of the local health district's testing protocol.
- If on-site testing is not available, considerations for any testing event should include proximity to the work site, work schedules, transportation needs, and availability of professional translation/interpretation services.
- Consider providing a walk-up testing option for all testing events. Farmworkers are highly dependent on their employer for their transportation, and driveup testing sites could be problematic for groups of workers arriving in vans or buses.
- Seek support from owners/operators for farmworkers to attend testing events with the understanding that workers will not be penalized for attending.
- Documentation and ID requirements for testing events create an additional barrier for many farmworkers. Fear related to sharing IDs or documents may prevent workers from wanting to be tested, even if they are symptomatic.
- Use of uniforms may create a barrier to testing for immigrant community members or others due to fear of law enforcement. Use of uniforms should be minimized whenever possible.

Provide culturally appropriate contact tracing and case management services.

- Utilize trusted community leaders to share messaging about contact tracing or case management to dispel myths and fears.
- ODH worked in partnership with the Ohio Hispanic & Latino Affairs Commission to develop a script (Appendix B) to inform the public about contact tracing. It can be translated into an appropriate language, recorded on video, and shared on the local health district's social media as well as applications often utilized by migrant workers (i.e., Facebook and WhatsApp groups). If the groups are unknown to the local health district, a trusted community connector/leader should be able to help identify which social media groups are used most often within the affected community.
- ODH provides a virtual pool of state-employed individuals available to support local health departments' COVID-19 contact tracing efforts. This pool of employees is intended to extend local capacity, with priority given to COVID-19 "hot spots" or "flareups." See Appendix C for more information.
- Consider reaching out to colleges of nursing and medicine for bilingual volunteers who can support community outreach (i.e., handing out flyers, helping at testing events, delivering food or supplies). Care should be taken with volunteers to ensure protection of private health information.
- Create a script and job aids for contact tracers to use when calling members of the public. This provides clarification and structure for contact tracers and can improve tracing outcomes. Review CDC's COVID-19 Sample Training Plans for Contact Tracers, Case Investigators, and Supervisors to assist with skill building and for resources for contact tracing staff. The state health department has made its contact tracing training available to anyone performing tracing in Ohio. See: Ohio Department of Health: COVID-19 Contact Tracer Training Course ID # 1091305. To register for the course, you will need to enter the access code: ODHCTT. Please do not share this course or access code with individuals outside your organization.

5 Communication

The United States Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has issued an updated bulletin, Ensuring the Rights of Persons with Limited English Proficiency (LEP) in Health Care During COVID-19.

- Any stigma related to outbreaks in the migrant farmworking community should be mitigated by acknowledging workers' status as essential workers and the importance of their work in maintaining the food supply and supporting the agriculture industry that contributes billions of dollars to Ohio's economy each year.
- Adopt a messaging campaign and encourage owners/operators to conduct trainings about the importance of wearing masks/cloth face coverings, washing hands, and social distancing. Messaging should be directed to owners/operators and farmworkers so both groups understand their role in reducing the spread of COVID-19.
- Contract with entities qualified to provide language access services through multiple types of media (telephonic interpretation, video remote interpreting, etc.).
- Disseminate COVID-19 information and messaging about testing and treatment in plain language and in the non-English languages prevalent in the affected area. All forms of media and targeted outreach to community and faith-based organizations should easily reach individuals with LEP.

- Create and widely disseminate to staff an up-todate list of in-person and remote translation and interpreter services and bilingual staff who are qualified to respond quickly to the needs of patients with LEP.
- Use "I Speak" resources or ask open-ended questions to determine an individual's written and spoken language preference at the first point of contact.
- Upon identifying a patient with LEP, make sure critical information is communicated in the patient's preferred language by using a qualified interpreter or translated materials, remotely if necessary.
- Where feasible, respect patients' wishes to use their own interpreter, such as an adult friend or family member, if they are qualified and if circumstantially appropriate.

For more information, review the U.S. Health and Human Services guide for Ensuring Language Access and Effective Communication During Response and Recovery: A Checklist for Emergency Responders.

Trusted Community Connectors

To access this information in a spreadsheet format, please email MinorityHealth@odh.ohio.gov.

Trusted community connectors and organizations can help establish trust within the migrant farmworker community an assist with facilitating access to services throughout the healthcare system. Faith-based organizations are not listed for each county provided, but efforts to partner with religious leaders for testing events and trusted community connectors will help improve attendance and build trust about testing events. Churches and faith-based facilities should be considered for testing events.

Mobility Managers with CARES Act Funding

To access this information in a spreadsheet format, please email MinorityHealth@odh.ohio.gov.

The Ohio Department of Transportation's Mobility Management Program increases access to mobility for Ohioans by increasing understanding and awareness of transportation needs, coordination of transportation options to meet needs, and building sustainable and healthy communities by integrating transportation into planning and programs. Mobility Managers are typically part of a planning organization and do not own or operate any transportation facilities. They can share contacts and/or help with connections to transit agencies or community representatives in the region. Some may have a demographer on staff that may be able to help analyze community population information. The Mobility Manager Programs listed here received funding from the CARES Act passed through FTA, specifically for transit agency relief. With this funding, they can support local transit agencies who assist the public with transportation-related needs for COVID-19.

In addition, the consular network has assisted our fellow citizens in the following areas: • Actions with local authorities and companies to help Mexicans in difficulties due to the pandemic. • Close, ongoing communication with local US authorities to ensure respect for the rights of our Mexican citizens, while complying with official regulations. • Advice on voluntary repatriation to Mexico. • Information about the medical services to which they may have access for testing or treatment of COVID-19. • Consular assistance has been provided to return the remains of the deceased to Mexico. In addition, the consulates are coordinating with state health authorities in order to comply with current health protocols when transporting the remains of COVID-19 victims. • The consulates are using the social networks and other media to continually inform the Mexican community about the services available to them during the pandemic and about the changes to and most recent decisions of local authorities. ENGLISH:

Hello, my name is [name] from [organization or location].

Today, I want to explain a new stage in the fight against COVID 19 – the tracking of its spread. This is done by determining who may be infected based on their contact with someone who has tested positive for COVID-19. In English, it's called "tracing."

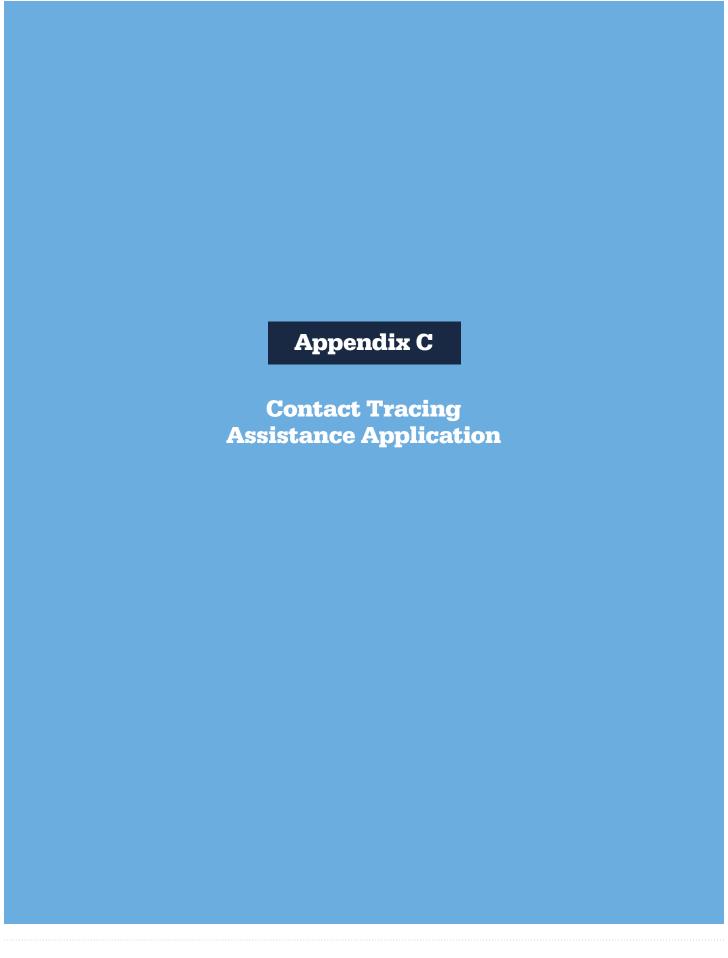

The Health Department in your community has started the process of tracking the disease spread to identify and alert people who have been in contact with someone infected with coronavirus.

They may be calling you on the phone and asking questions such as:

What is your name, where do you work, who do you live with, if there are people over 65 at home? They will ask about your health, your date of birth, how you feel and if you have noticed changes. They may also ask who you have been with lately and what places you frequently visit. This is all to track the virus.

All this information is confidential. They will not ask you about your social security number or migratory status. They will also give you information in case you feel sick for help.

Please assist the health department staff. The more we help, the sooner we will control the spread of the Coronavirus. Thank you.
