MEDIEVAL SANDWICH

Once a bustling and prosperous port, Sandwich is now said to be 'one of the most well preserved medieval towns in Britain'. See it all from above by climbing St Peter's Tower or wander through unspoilt streets, where there are more half-timbered houses than any other street in England or follow the historic town trail. Built in 1579, the Guildhall dominates the Market Square that was once a corn and cattle market. It still has a weekly markets and a monthly farmers' market.

In 1255, the first captive elephant was delivered to England as a gift from the French King to Henry III. Arriving at Sandwich quayside, it was then taken on foot to the King's menagerie in the Tower of London.

It is well worth a walk along the newly refurbished quayside to Fisher Gate - dating from 1384 and one of the two surviving original medieval town gates - the other is the Barbican which later served as a toll gate for the bridge.

Food has always been associated with the town - in the 18th century the Earl of Sandwich is reputed to have devised the popular snack, and this is celebrated in the annual food fayre.

There are many pubs, restaurants and cafés found in the winding lanes of the town as well as a variety of unique independent shops.

UNIQUE COUNTRYSIDE

OUR GREEN AND PLEASANT LAND!

We are best known for our coastal areas and the famous White Cliffs but travel just a few miles inland and you will discover the beauty of the North Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) and surrounding countryside, with many little villages and hamlets nestling in our green and pleasant land!

Temple Ewell is situated in the Dour valley and was first mentioned in a charter of c.772. In the village of Shepherdswell there are two fine old yew trees in the churchyard which are thought to be around 1,000 years' old and from here you can step back in time with a trip on a heritage railway.

Coldred is one of the highest places in East Kent, nearly 400ft above sea level. The cottages and pub around the village green date from the early 17th century. Take a stroll through Alkham Valley, within the Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, with unique chalk downland and ancient woodlands.

Goodnestone, locally pronounced as 'Gunston', has a connection through its prestigious stately home and park to Jane Austen. Easry once boasted a Royal Palace for the Kings of Kent, as early as 660 AD, and Wingham has several half-timbered houses in the high street which are over 500 years' old. Close by is the Parish of Ash which retains 11 of its 12 original manor houses.

PROUD INDUSTRIAL HISTORY

As well as the natural landscape, agriculture, the maritime and shipping industry and coal mining have shaped our coast and countryside to what it is today.

It was first speculated that there was coal beneath Kent in the 1840's and the Kent Coalfield Syndicate was set up by Arthur Burr in 1896. Shakespeare Colliery was Kent's first coal mine but never produced any commercial coal. The first commercial coal was brought to the surface in 1912 at Snowdown Colliery. Tilmanstone Colliery was begun near the village of Eythorne in 1906. Betteshanger was the biggest colliery in Kent and was the last Kent colliery to close in 1989.

Find out more about the industrial heritage in White Cliffs Country with a visit to some of the local attractions including a water mill which supplied flour to troops defending the Kent coast from possible invasion, and a lighthouse which was a lifesaving beacon for mariners guiding ships around the treacherous Goodwin Sands.

OUR BEAUTIFUL CHURCHES

White Cliffs Country has some wonderful churches. Barrestone is known for its village church with its Norman architecture and wonderful stone carvings. Other examples of Norman churches can be found at Worth and Eastry.

The stained glass windows in the 14th century church of St James in Staple commemorate the local Plummers and the Ffrench-Blakes, old families of the village.

Probably the smallest church in England, still in regular use, is St Edmund's Chapel in Dover. The Chapel stands on what was once a cemetery and was probably intended for use as a chapel of rest. Over three quarters of the chapel is original and the remainder has been restored using medieval materials.

Dating from Saxon times and situated in the heart of Dover town is St Mary's Church. The church has several beautiful stained glass windows including the Great East Window and The Zeebrugge Window.
